The divisions in cultures in which I live
 To one my heart the other my soul, I give
 If I had a choice of only one that I could to.
 I dear not choose nor dear to see
 Be set to one I owe my soul
 The other bears what makes me whole
 If to choose between these pondering choice
 I will not echo my silent voice
 Cause I will not choose one another
 I will not leave my father or mother
 And I could have bear to everything.
 The only world in which I shall ever know
 If you are troubled by this choice
 Listen to this single voice
 To live in turn is something learned
 Never given but rather earned.
